Jan is a speaker and author. He recently published the book, Exodus of Our Lives: Finding Your Promised Land.

In the self-improvement market, Exodus of Our Lives, will appeal to readers wanting to improve their ability to navigate the messiness of life, to fulfill their purpose, to develop a deeper connection with Jesus, or to raise their consciousness to achieve what they desire in their lives. Anyone looking for a way to better themselves and to better understand their life journey, who want to move farther along the spiritual path, or just simply improve their current conditions will find this book useful.

Jan is retired from the military, which taught him discipline and organization; has owned businesses, which taught him to wear many hats; and was ordained as a pastor in 2008, which fulfilled his life's calling.

He has been known to frequent places most Christians stay away from like bars and homeless shelters, just to get to know people and share in their lives. His band plays often for an organization that feeds the hungry in Sanford, Florida. One of his passions is seeing people reach their promised land.

Jan loves a good German beer, a good cup of coffee, good conversation full of laughter, and jamming with other musicians and making good music. He and his wife frequent the Disney World parks in Orlando, Florida searching for thrills and hidden Mickey's.

He owns a small recording studio to help Christian musicians record and produce songs as well as those he writes for his wife and for Jesus. His studio, the JamminStation, is one of his favorite quiet places to write and study scripture.

One of Jan's greatest passions is his family. He and his wife, Kelly, have been married for over 34 years. They have two married daughters, five grandsons and live just north of Orlando, Florida. His two daughters and their families live close; gatherings are a regular occurrence. He especially loves spending countless hours with his five grandsons playing pirate games, rolling on the floor, and setting up the church early every Sunday morning.
